Scarecrow Contest Ushers in Season

By Laura Fedak Pedulli

It was hay day at the Mattapoisett Free Public Library on early Saturday afternoon as scarecrows of all forms greeted onlookers for a bit of pre-Halloween revelry.

A traditional scarecrow, scuba scarecrow, monster scarecrow, book-reading scarecrow, and pink fairy scarecrow – and even a bear scarecrow – adorned the lawn of the library for the Second Annual Scarecrow Contest on October 15.

"It's a seasonal, fun event," said Jessica Noblet of the Friends of the Mattapoisett Library. "There are a lot of creative people here. It is fun."

Despite the blustery weather, she said people were having a good time. While judges made their rounds, families and children enjoyed Halloween-inspired treats and crafts in the library's conference room downstairs.

On the Cover: The McCullough family made this scarecrow, which won "Most Classic", at the October 15, 2011 Mattapoisett Free Public Library scarecrow event. For those who missed the Mattapoisett event, the Rochester library is accepting submissions for their scarecrow contest and will display them for the next two weekends. Also, the Elizabeth Taber Library in Marion will display its special scarecrow on October 27 at 3:00 pm. Photo by Felix Perez.

The bulk of participants were children, although the event is open to people of all ages, Ms. Noblet said.

Second grader Alexandra Macallister was one young participant, and she earned "The Scariest Scarecrow" award for her creation. She fashioned her Medusa scarecrow with a paper mache head painted green with a prominent red mouth, piled on green pods for the hair, a black shirt and lacy black scarf (compliments of her mother), and blue jeans.

"It was the first time she did paper mache," said her mother, Cynthia Macallister. "It took the head three days to dry in the kitchen." She said Alexandra had just assembled the scarecrow during the past few days. "We didn't even know if we were going to make it."

The "Most Original Scarecrow" went to the Cain family, who included Reece and his mother, Kellie. Their scuba scarecrow sported Reece's scuba outfit and its tresses were fresh seaweed pulled from the beach.

Kellie said their scarecrow pays homage to their family's very favorite summer activity: going to the beach. "We spend every day at the beach at Angelica Point. We're very beach oriented," she said.

Also, she said the fact the scarecrow was made with reusable items added to the experience. "Nothing

Prior to launching into his lecture, Mr. Mendell said that, being in Marion "one half of me is back home," and explained that his mother grew up in Marion and lived off Hermitage Road, across from Ministers' Rock. His mother and father met at Tabor Academy.

As a historian, Mr. Mendell told the group that he likes to write a lecture a year to present to local groups, including the New Bedford Whaling Museum, where he is volunteer and member. Mr. Mendell is also the President of the Mattapoissett Historical Society and the official Town Historian. Prior to his retirement, he was a history teacher for 35 years at Avon Old Farms School in Avon, CT.

According to Mr. Mendell, Bartholomew Gosnold was the first Englishman to set foot on the island in 1602, a full 18 years prior to the pilgrim landing. Mr. Gosnold named Cape Cod and according to Mr. Mendell, ships logs and documents state that codfish were abundant in the area. Other trivia included that Martha's Vineyard, formerly known as Vineyard, was renamed Martha's Vineyard by Gosnold because he rounded the island on the date of his daughter Martha's fifth birthday.

One humorous story involved the Coast Guard moving a building off Cuttyhunk by barge at high tide early one morning in foggy weather. A lobsterman pulling traps looked up to see the house passing by and "swore off booze from that day on". Mr. Mendell said that Cuttyhunk has a winter population of approximately 64.

The Wampanoag natives were friendly to the crew of ships landing on Cuttyhunk and the chain of islands nearby. Mr. Mendell estimated the population of natives at around 40,000 in the early 1600's, but in 1617, an English fishing vessel had one crewmember who was ill and he was put ashore. According to Mr. Mendell, the common thought was that the sick individual had smallpox, which spread to the natives, reducing their population in the region to less than 4,000 several years later.

In addition to showing land erosion and the changing shape of the island over time, Mr. Mendell said that Shakespeare's The Tempest, describes Cuttyhunk exactly. "The possibility is that one of three individuals knew Shakespeare: Gosnold, Gabriel Archer or the Third Earl of Southampton," said Mr. Mendell, "and one of them gave very detailed information to him about the island."

Over time, Cuttyhunk changed hands and was very valuable land with virgin timber, which was cleared for pasturing sheep. Tenant farmers lived there fishing and farming. Later, ways to make a living came by offering ships piloting services to help avoid running aground. "[The] flip side to that was the salvage business," said Mr. Mendell, joking that if the ship didn't want to pay for the piloting offer, they'd pay with their ship, with islanders salvaging anything and everything they could, including using wood decking and masts to burn in their stoves over winter.

Mr. Mendell spoke about the last whaling ship to leave the port of New Bedford in 1924 the Wanderer. Built in New Bedford in 1878, the ship was due to sail on August 26, 1924 but anchored off Naushon Island for the night. Half the crew went ashore for their last night prior to the proposed sail the next morning. With not enough crew aboard, a storm blew and the anchor dragged. The anchor line caught on the rudder and it was dark. "There weren't any flashlights back then," said Mr. Mendell. The ship landed on rocks and was destroyed.

Mr. Mendell told the group that the mast of the ship resides in the Mattapoisett Historical Society's museum and invited the group to come and learn more about the history that surrounds the Tri-Town.

a dozen walkers took an inaugural hike on the new trail in the Old Mattapoisett Neck Road area that begins on the corner of Anchorage Way and Tara Road.

According to Land Trust President Gary Johnson, the 109-acre preserve, containing one-third salt marshes and two-thirds wetlands, was acquired by the Trust in 2007 after three years of negotiation with property owner Wayne Walega.

"It was not a cheap acquisition," Mr. Johnson said, noting that federal remediation funds from the Bouchard Oil Spill helped cover the cost. The Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife holds the conservation restriction for the land.

to Molly's Cove was completed thanks to Walker and Nathan Fuchs – who are twins, seniors at Old Rochester Regional High School and two of Massachusetts's 60 Eagle Scouts.

The brothers spent three weeks of their summer building the one-half mile trail from scratch – working six-hour days in the heat.

"It meanders. It is not a straight shot, which makes it more interesting," said Paul Osenkowski, a member of the trust. "They used their heads and their own self starting ability to create the trail."

The trail itself curves around trees and rocks through the forested wetlands – and purposely was built to dissuade ATVs and other motorized vehicles from traveling the path.

The trail meets up with a pre-existing path that shortly guides walkers to the finale of the hike: the open salt marsh, filled with fiddler crabs and housing a couple of osprey platforms. In addition to osprey, Mr. Osenkowski said that bird sightings in the area include the rare tri-colored herring as well as a variety of hawks, including the marsh hawk, red-shoulder hawk and red tail hawk.

"These are some of the cleanest waters in the bay," he added.

A short distance onto the trail there is a spur that goes out to a salt marsh where an observation tower is planned for construction for next year. Mr. Osenkowski said the trust hopes to give another high school youth – Alex Buckley – the job of constructing the tower.

The Land Trust's work with young people, including the scouts, is a priority of the organization, Ms. Osenkowski said. "It was former director Alan Shubert who changed the direction of the Land Trust" to cultivate a relationship with the Boy Scouts. The Fuchs brothers, in fact, were tapped to work on the new trail project after showing competence at trail work as Boys Scouts.

Everyone at the walk seemed pleased with the result, including the Fuchs' mother, Lee Heald.

"I'm not only proud of [my sons], but thankful to the Land Trust for taking them on," she said. "Families can't do it all, groups need to take them on. They need their first job."

Sandy Herring also expressed satisfaction with the Fuchs' work. "If I was here by myself, I could follow this. I'm thrilled," she said.

"I'm so pleased with the work the [Fuchs brothers] did," echoed Mr. Johnson. "The layout they did is so interesting, in the way that it meanders through the woods."

Masonic Open House in Marion

By Joan Hartnett-Barry

With the slogan "Making Good Men Great", members of Marion's Pythagorean Lodge opened their doors to the public for a tour last Saturday. The open house was a continuation of the ongoing celebration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of the lodge, which happened in 1861. The lodge (not the building) was established in July of 1861, near the start of the Civil War. In 1911, the newly built lodge on Spring

One of the highlights was a tour of the third floor, known as the members' lounge, which has recently been renovated. The room boasts several large windows, one offering a water view in winter when leaves are off the trees. The floors have recently been sanded and a member donated comfortable furniture. A kitchen is also available. "This used to be the dining hall," said Tom Dexter, Master of the Lodge. "We plan to use this space for members and their families to get together for Super Bowl parties, holiday events and for fellowship," said Mr. Dexter.

many artifacts including books, photographs, hats and clothing used by members of the lodge over the years. The elaborate woodwork on the stairways, handrails and floors show the pride taken by the builders back in the 1860's. The crown jewel of the renovation project are the colorful mosaic tile murals of Masonic symbols at the entry to the lodge. Last October, the mosaics were completed by Wareham artist and lodge member, Paul Ciccotelli. Two chunks of the original faded tiles were kept for posterity and reside in a glass case on the second floor.

When originally founded, the lodge had three officers and six members. Today, the lodge has nine officers and over 110 members from Marion and nearby towns.

According to Art Schneider, Secretary of the lodge and a Mattapoisett resident, the building was the first in Marion to be built with electrical wiring. "Many other buildings were retrofitted with wiring, but ours was the first to have it incorporated right into the building plans," said Mr. Schneider.

For more information on the Marion Pythagorean Lodge, contact Tom Dexter at 508-748-0330 or Art Schneider at 508-758-2886.

Mattapoisett Focuses on Fire Safety

By Joan Hartnett-Barry

A light drizzle didn't put a damper on the buzz and excitement at the open house at the Mattapoisett Fire Department on Thursday evening, October 13.

Mattapoisett Cub Scout Pack 53 arrived, along with siblings and parents to start off the evening event. The event attracted over two hundred people, with something for everyone, including a "jaws of life" demonstration with firefighters removing the entire top of a vehicle donated by a local towing company. The equipment is used when those inside cannot be rescued by opening the doors of the vehicle.

The impressive display of fire trucks and equipment alone was a draw for young and old who climbed in and out of the cabs to blow the horn or look at the control panels.

A clever photo opportunity made of painted wood cut-outs of a fire truck cab and Sparky the Fire Dog were set up with a place for children to put their head in as a firefighter driving the truck or as Sparky himself.

"We've had an open house here during National Fire Prevention Week for years," said Chief Andrew Murray. Mr. Murray grew up in Mattapoisett, attended Mattapoisett schools and ORRHS and lives in the town.

"This gives the public a chance to meet their firefighters," said Chief Murray.

"Today we were at Center School as part of prevention week... we want to show the children what a firefighter looks like in full gear so children won't be afraid, how to call 911, how to stop, drop and roll, and how to stay low and crawl out when smoke is in the home," said Chief Murray.

"The whole purpose of the week (fire prevention) is to educate adults and children about how to prevent fires or what to do in the event of one happening in their home or nearby," said Mr. Murray.

Andy Bobola, firefighter and town building inspector, manned the table with handouts including crayons and coloring books and other serious pamphlets about flooding issues, emergency preparedness, permits, cooking dangers, smoke alarm information and other valuable information. "Grab a bag and take one for your niece or nephew," said Mr. Bobola. "We want people to be informed... that's what we're about," said Mr. Bobola.

Mr. Bobola said that some adults come to the open house to ask questions about permits, old fire extinguishers and other issues that they might not otherwise be willing to come in and ask about. Old fire extinguishers can be donated to the fire department and are used in demonstrations or properly destroyed.

Members of the Mattapoisett Fire Department Ladies Auxiliary were instrumental in the festivities by catering the event with pizza, juice and desserts and giving out balloons and plastic fire hats, which were a big hit. Participants wandered over for a piece of pizza and sat at the tables set up for friends and neighbors to sit down, meet and talk about the efforts of the event.

Also on hand was a "Safe House" trailer which mimicked a real home, with a kitchen, living room and bedroom with various hazards pointed out, which attendees could walk through. According to Chief Murray, the loan of the safe house was by a state grant which allows rotation of the trailer for educational purposes. "We had it today at Center School and had dozens of children walk through it," said Chief Murray.

"Families need to have a safe place to meet away from a fire or emergency event... we ask the children to go home and speak with their families to decide where that will be," he added.

When asked about pets, Chief Murray said that many pets evacuate with the family, but that firefighters meet with the family at their meeting place to learn if there are any pets still in the home. "We do our best to get them out safely," he said.

With a great turnout and many young people attending, the message of fire safety was brought to the minds of many, who may now be more prepared in the event of a fire due to the time and effort of the Mattapoisett Fire Department. For more information

VOMITING CATS

I have 2 cats. Both have vomited in the house a few times a week since I have owned them. The 5 year old female really pigs out. She eats her dry cat food really fast and then vomits it about 5 minutes later. We try feeding her small, frequent meals and that seems to help but it is labor intensive. Do you have any thoughts?

Cats that eat their food very rapidly and then vomit need to have their food intake slowed down. Try covering the food with 2-4 golf balls. The cat will have to nudge the balls out of the way to get a mouthful and this will slow down their eating. Changing from dry to canned food may also help but will make more of a mess if it doesn't stay down.

My other cat has always vomited 3-4 times a week. She vomits, food sometimes and just yellow frothy bile at others. Occasionally there is a clump of hair in the vomit. She seems healthy and happy otherwise. What can I do to help her?

This may be more difficult to manage. Cats with this pattern of vomiting may have a number of problems. Two of the more common are a bacterial infection in the stomach caused by Helicobacter felis or a condition called inflammatory bowel disease. Try changing your cats diet to a different kind of food. Often the use of a premium cat food will help. If 2-3 diet changes over a couple of months is not helpful then discuss the problem with your veterinarian.

Bog Tour Shows Benefits of Open Space By Laura Fedak Pedulli

Cranberry bogs and open space mutually benefit each other in preserving Rochester's agricultural heritage and ecology, according to Rochester Land Trust's Kirby Gilmore. This concept was the take-away message from a two-hour long cranberry bog tour organized by the trust to experience the bog and open space surrounding it.

Mr. Gilmore, himself a bog owner, presented the tour of cranberry grower Doug Beaton's bog operation adjacent to Mary Pond's road on the Sunday morning of October 16. The Rochester Land Trust holds a conservation restriction of the property – which is part of the larger Eastover Farms Preservation – which guarantees that it will always remain undeveloped and used for agriculture.

According to Noreen Hartley, who also was on the tour, the bog is part of 800 acres of conservation – 400 acres in Rochester and 400 acres in Marion – that are protected as open space for educational, recreational and conservation purposes.

That morning, the group meandered around the bogs – some post-harvest, some on the brink of harvest and others with vines years away from cultivation. The visitors enjoyed cranberries fresh from an active bog and learned about the trade so defining to Rochester.

"The open space provides habitats for insects that pollinates the bogs. Open space is essential for growers to maintain bogs," explained Mr. Gilmore of the open space/bog synergy. "Also, it increases property values."

As background, Mr. Gilmore explained that the bogs were originally built in the 1920s. More recently Doug Beaton purchased the Hiller bogs in 2009 for $3 million with the condition that they remain under a conservation restriction. He said Mr. Beaton purchased the bogs even though the volatile market is no recipe for financial success, and knowing he could not sell the land over to a developer due to the open space restriction.

"He took a risk buying it," he said.

Some common visitors of the bogs include coyotes, deer, field mice and even the occasional rat. He said while these animals inflict no harm, "poverty grass" which grows among the cranberry vines constitute a real threat.

He also pointed to phragmites, a common invasive reed found in wetlands that have taken residence in the bogs. "This is the enemy of the natural environment," he said.

Mr. Gilmore said another threat to the bog farm is the fireworm, a larvae of a moth that imbeds itself in the vine. However, the bog industry has moved away from organophosphate – a toxic insecticide known for its use during World War II – to more environmentally friendly insect controls to handle these nuisances.

Although this year the cranberry harvest for growers is overall plentiful, the uncertainty of the cranberry market is a challenge for a grower. The going rate for cranberries – which can bring in anywhere between $12 a barrel to $65 a barrel over a ten-year period – can make a bog owner a winner or loser season to season, and meanwhile maintenance of the bogs is very expensive, Mr. Gilmore said.

"A bog operation is a very capital intense," he said. To replant a new bog, it can cost $28,000 to $35,000 an acre – a hefty proposition when livable cranberry prices are not a guarantee. These newly planted bogs also require patience, as it can take years for them to be ready for cultivation. At least two of the bogs on Mr. Beaton's property contained plants still in the development phase.

Given the price of cranberries holds out, the replanting is worth it and the bogs can have great longevity. Mr. Gilmore said cranberry vines in a bog could last for years, noting that he owns a bog that has been active since 1906. Also, more recently planted bogs can yield 280 to 350 barrels an acre compared to 110 to 120 barrels in the olden days.

Mr. Gilmore said that despite the challenges of running a bog operation, he hopes that the "only agriculture really viable in the area" endures not just for the financial benefit and jobs created, but also for the environment.

State Rep Defends Rochester Water Rights

By Anne Kakley

New Bedford's long-standing tradition of pulling water from the Quittacas Pond Complex in Rochester was to be contested at the Joint Committee of Municipalities and Regional Government in Boston on Tuesday, October 18. In a October 14 meeting with the Rochester Board of Selectmen, Representative William Straus (MA-D), said he would present a home-rule petition to make New Bedford pay Rochester for water sold to other municipalities.

The agreement, which is a century old, was originally intended for the cities of New Bedford, Fall River and Taunton to take what they need from the Assawompset/Quittacas Pond Complex for city use. However, over the years, New Bedford had entered agreements with Dartmouth, Freetown, Acushnet and Fairhaven, to sell the water that they pump from Rochester at the rate of four million gallons a day.

According to Selectman Naida Parker, the town has been fighting the city to have a right to the water use for at least five years now, with New Bedford not responding to Rochester's requests. The Board expressed frustration, saying that they feel they are losing out on revenue with little recourse. Former Selectman Fred Underhill said that the town is missing out on approximately $350,000 annually in lost tax revenue. Moreover, the city's $28 million dollar treatment plant is located in Rochester.

"Payment in lieu of taxes in no way cover the services that Rochester provides for [the city of New Bedford]," said Town Administrator Richard LaCamera.

"What has happened in the way of informal approaches with [New Bedford]?" asked Rep. Straus.

"It's been unsuccessful," said Selectman Parker.

"They don't need that kind of allocation," said Mr. LaCamera, who pointed out that New Bedford wasn't actually expanding. Mr. LaCamera said that he believed that the towns who also abut the pond complex – Lakeville, Middleboro and Freetown – would also be in favor of Rochester's attempt to home rule a petition for water control.

"I'm not looking for a lot of fanfare," said Rep. Straus. "My goal is that the committee will take action immediately, the day after the hearing... The basic argument I'm going to present is the fairness. Whatever the city of New Bedford needs, they have the right to draw, but not anything commercial."

Mr. Underhill pointed out that Rochester has repeatedly complied with New Bedford regarding requests to protect the watershed area, particularly in relation to septic regulations in North Rochester. "That's been a continual process over a 30 year period," he said. "We've tried to oblige them... almost everything we've tried to ask of them, we get absolutely zero."

The bill that Rep. Straus will present at Tuesday's meeting would require the city of New Bedford to make payments to Rochester for use of the water, in the amount of ten cents per 1,000 gallons of water it sells to other municipalities.

Town Retains Unified Tax Rate

Rochester Board of Selectmen

Laura Fedak Pedulli

Per the recommendation of the Board of Assessors, Rochester Selectmen at their October 17 meeting opted to retain the single tax, or unified tax rate, for the town among its residential, commercial, open space and industrial classes. This decision is subject to Department of Revenue certification.

John Mello, Chairman of the Board of Assessors, said that the town's value overall decreased by 3 percent, while the allocation of property values among the different classes "stayed essentially the same."

"Since the values stayed the same, it is our recommendation to continue with the unified tax rate, rather than split tax rate," he said, adding that a unified tax rate would ensure that the distribution remains unaffected.

On a related note, Town Administrator Richard LaCamera informed the public that Board of Assessors

In other business, Rochester's Conservation Agent Laurell Farinon announced that the town was awarded a $15,000 grant from the Buzzards Bay National Estuary Program. This money will allow the town to hire a consultant to convert wetland maps into digital format for use with GIS programs.

In other conservation-related business, the Selectmen approved a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between the Town and the Rochester Land Trust regarding the purchase of a 29-acre parcel at 72 Marion Road. The Land Trust put forward about $30,000 of the $75,000 cost of the property, with $45,000 deriving from grant monies.

"The Land Trust set forth a significant amount of money, so they would like to hold a Conservation Restriction," Mr. Farinon said, explaining the purpose of the MOU.

The town is still looking for volunteers to serve on an Agricultural Commission, Ms. Farinon also told the board. Rochester residents authorized the creation of a seven-member commission at its town meeting in 2005, yet only three individuals have stepped forward with interest since that time, Mr. LaCamera said.

To increase interest, Mr. Farinon said she is distributing a flier in early November to potential appointees in the local agriculture industry.

"We realized that most people don't know what an Agriculture Commission does, so we prepared a draft flier to send notification to see if they are interested," Ms. Farinon said, commenting that commissions promote agriculture and facilitate access to technical assistance.

"Each community has own a focus, and it is up to the farmers where they want to focus," she added.

In the Town Administrator's report, Mr. LaCamera said the Rochester Memorial School expansion/renovation project soon is closing out, and preliminary estimates show that the work completed is $450,000 to $500,000 under budget. "We're still hoping for more, but that's pretty good. Everybody is happy with the result of the project," he said.

Board Remains Steadfast on 911 Vote

Marion Board of Selectmen

By Anne Kakley

At their October 18, 2011 meeting, an exchange between Marion selectmen resulted in the upholding of a Board decision, despite a request from Selectman Jonathan Henry to reconsider their previously-made vote to end participation in a 911 regionalization study for Marion.

Selectman Henry was not present when the vote was made the August 16 meeting. At that meeting, Selectmen Stephen Cushing and Roger Blanchette met with Police Chief Lincoln Miller and Fire Chief Thomas Joyce to hear how 911 regionalization would impact Marion. Based on Chief Miller and Chief Joyce's feedback, the Board had determined, in Selectman Henry's absence, that regionalization would provide no financial advantages to Marion and would provide several safety disadvantages.

Selectman Henry, a Southeastern Regional Planning and Economic Development District (SRPEDD) representative, said that the study Marion had chosen to discontinue, could still be valuable to the town and could be the future of 911 services.

"There's a lot of opposition to regionalizing 911, particularly from emergency service professionals, and they have their reasons," said Selectman Henry, who said that successful 911 regionalization has been employed in the Berkshires of Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Hampshire. "I think more study is needed. I'm a member of SRPEDD. I sit in on all the meetings," he said "I think it's premature to withdraw from the study at this time."

Selectmen Cushing and Blanchette remained steadfast in their previous vote, however. "The police and fire chiefs are both dead set against it," said Selectman Blanchette. "They sat in here for a good, long time and explained their positions," he said, adding that a lot of new equipment would have to get tossed and replaced for the sake of compatibility.

"I don't think we should be fearful of going in that direction in an abstract manner," said Selectman Henry. "You've got to look forward. Because we've always done it this way, does not mean it's the way to do it. It doesn't mean you're right or up with modern technology."

"I feel this is going to be an expensive proposition for the town of Marion," Selectman Blanchette responded. "We're talking about hundreds of thousands of dollars that we are going to have to put out."

The Board again asked Chief Miller and Chief Joyce to weigh in on the matter.

"I read the study as it came out," said Chief Miller. "A lot of the report is predicated on grants. I think we all know what happens with grants... grants go away. Once we go on that system, it's very hard to go back. Also, we lose local control." Moreover, Chief Miller, cited safety concerns, saying that the police station would be closed at night because dispatch and 911 services would be located elsewhere. He cited cases of domestic abuse and even a recent hunting injury, as instances where injured or threatened people come to the station for help.

The Board took no action on the matter, upholding the previous vote to discontinue involvement in the regionalization study.

In an appointment with Quelle Lane resident Carol Amick, the Board heard a letter from the Quelle Lane Association in regards to a proposed Marion Open Space Acquisition Commission (MOSAC) land purchase in the area of Quelle, Bayberry, Holly, Thistle/ Cedar/ Bayview Lane area, off Converse Road. The land acquisition proposal had been presented by MOSAC member John Rockwell at an October 12 meeting, which the Board of Selectmen had attended. The land acquisition, according to MOSAC, would open up roughly 700 feet of coastline for beach and recreational uses to the public.

In her letter, Ms. Amick reiterated concerns that had been previously expressed by the private association abutting the proposed public land. She said that the acquisition would create parking issues and privacy issues for the association, which is currently closed to the public. Moreover, she questioned the legality of the purchase, saying that the land in question – referred to as the "Hall" purchase – has changed greatly since its last survey, which took place in the 1940s.

Ms. Amick said that MOSAC had received a faulty appraisal as a part of its purchase and sale agreement, based on assessed square footage that was twice the actual square footage and a statement from Mr. Rockwell to the assessment company calling the private association's right to street ownership as "questionable".

The Board thanked Ms. Amick for her letter, and said that they would be consulting with Town Counsel, Jon Witten, in regards to how the town would proceed with the land purchase, which is already under agreement.

Relatedly, the Board read a letter from MOSAC member Sue Maxwell Lewis, offering her resignation, effective immediately. The Board said that the town would soon be looking for interested Marion residents to fill the MOSAC position until the next town election.

In other news the Board:

- Granted a request for street closure to the Marion Art Center for the annual Halloween parade, which will take place on October 31.
- Declared Tuesday, December 13, to be the date for the annual town holiday party, which takes place at the Music Hall as a part of the Board's regular meeting.

Residents: Acquisition is Unfair, Unwanted

By Anne Kakley

Approximately 100 residents filled the Music Hall on October 12 to attend a meeting concerning a potential land acquisition deal off Converse Road in a private association. The land purchase, which was proposed by the Marion Open Space Acquisition Commission, would secure approximately 700 feet of beach for public use, according to MOSAC member John Rockwell.

Mr. Rockwell presented the potential land purchase to a room full of residents from the area of Bayberry, Holly and Quelle Lanes, Converse Road, Aucoot and beyond. The proposed land acquisition was ill-received by residents who thought that the deal was haphazard and poorly planned.

Citing lack of parking, lack of public land access, safety and health concerns, residents objected to the land purchase that Mr. Rockwell said would give beach and shellfishing access to the public.

Additionally, taxpayers objected to the purchase price of the land, which Mr. Rockwell said would be $60,000 if the purchase and sale were completed by November 21. After that date, he said, the purchase price would climb to $70,000. The purchase price is considerably higher than the town's assessment for the lots, which is $1,700, but Mr. Rockwell claimed that an independent appraisal placed the lot value at $92,000 to $100,000.

Resident Jonathan MacLean expressed dismay that there had not been more than one appraisal made, and that the land acquisition had been done in an underhanded manner.

"It appears that you are just sliding it in," said Mr. MacLean.

"That's how we do land deals," said Mr. Rockwell, who said that MOSAC was an elected town committee that was within their rights to complete land purchases without town meeting approval.

Residents contested the legality of such a land purchase, since the selling property owner may not even legally own the land in question. Currently, the land acquisition deal is being reviewed by Town Counsel Jon Witten for a title search, Mr. Rockwell said.

Mr. Rockwell claimed that this was a rare opportunity for MOSAC – who currently has $424,000 in its coffers – to create a public beach. “We have been trying since I have been on the commission to find just one waterfront lot... these things come up very rarely,” said Mr. Rockwell.

Mr. Rockwell confirmed that the purchase and sale agreement had already been signed and the deal would be going through pending a clean title. Selectman Roger Blanchette, called the land deal a "debacle", and urged the abutting residents to obtain their own appraisals in an attempt to "nullify" the purchase deal by getting an appraisal closer to the town's assessed value.

"[The town is] pretty accurate with assessments," said Mr. Blanchette. "Somebody in this room needs to challenge that valuation."

Quelle Lane resident Carol Amick said that the residents would do what they had to do to prevent the deal and to prevent public access over their private way. "We will put up gates, which we have the right to do," she said. She presented MOSAC with a series of pictures showing the Hall property at various tides, from low to high.

Residents claimed that the beach was usually under water, and was of little value to the town. Moreover, they claimed that the land was probably not conveyable by the seller, since over the years, it had been reclaimed by the ocean and had shifted a great deal.

"You're paying 60K to add to Sippican Harbor to buy land that's under water," said Ms. Amick. On behalf of the Quelle Lane Association, she urged MOSAC to withdraw from the purchase and sale agreement.

"How does it suddenly become public property?" asked Converse Road resident Lawrence Warner.

"Someone has to accept it as public property. What if they don't accept it? We all here are taxpayers. It would seem that we are buying something that we don't want."

"Where's the BOH in this? There's no facilities," said Marilynne Gaffey, an Aucoot Cove resident. "There were other venues that were open for purchase that would not change private into public... why did you pick this?"

Marion resident Ted North told the audience that they could petition the selectmen to defer the October

The meeting created more questions for the residents, with MOSAC having very few answers to issues of safety, privacy, access and liability.

"We're going to have to send all this off to town counsel... before we can decide anything," said Mr. Rockwell.

students are outperforming their peers in the state on the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) tests, but are struggling to meet growth requirements with many students still in the failing/need improvement categories for math and English Language Arts (ELA).

Junior High Principal Kevin Brogioli reviewed the MCAS 2011 scores at the ORR School Committee meeting on October 12. The MCAS is a testing program with the objective of the No Child Left Behind Law that all students be proficient in reading and math by 2014.
MCAS stems from the Education Reform Law of 1993
that requires testing on the Massachusetts Curriculum Framework learning standards for students in all district schools.

Principal Brogioli said that overall, the school is meeting state performance targets for math, but not ELA.
However, the percentage of junior high students scoring at the proficient and advanced level in math, ELA and science dipped compared to last year – with the exception that eighth grade ELA students performed better this year than in 2010.

Mr. Brogioli said that some concern lies in the drop of eighth graders performing at the advanced/proficient level in math from 75 percent to 60 percent. He said a change in a math teacher could in part account for the drop.

In science, about 43 percent of eighth grade students were deemed advanced and proficient. "In science, there are not very many advanced students – and that's a concern," he said.

Student growth – which shows how ORR junior high school kids perform compared to students with similar score histories and backgrounds – also was not where it should be, Mr. Brogioli reported. The most notable drop is for eighth grade math students – whose median Student Growth Profile dropped from 63 to 37. "Low growth is really what we need to move over," he said.

Principal Brogioli noted, however, that middle schools and junior high schools throughout the state "are in the same boat" and failing to keep pace with MCAS performance benchmarks.

"It's a problem everywhere, but we have to deal with the problem here," he said. The principal laid out a number of interventions to help improve scores for next year, including various professional development trainings, increased intervention for struggling students, the addition of a full time math skills teacher, more teacher analysis of MCAS scores, and developmental reading for grade seven.

High school MCAS results will be presented at the committee's November meeting.

In other business, Superintendent Douglas White introduced Caitlin Meajher, the district's new Food Service Director who joined the staff three weeks ago.

Ms. Meajher described herself as a registered dietician with experience in the food service operations at Boston University and Jordan Hospital in Plymouth.

"I'm really happy to be here. I'm aware of the financial standing of program and working hard with staff to improve the program and reduce the deficit," she said.

Mr. White also said that the Massachusetts Teachers Association has requested to open the existing collective bargaining agreements for secretaries and assistants for the purpose of negotiating successor agreements.

In business not on the agenda, parent Kathy Smilen approached the board about creating a new policy on homework.

"I have concerns that homework is being used to inflate grades, but homework should be used as an assessment for teachers," she said. After some conversation with board members, Ms. Smilen said she would work to organize a parent group to draft a homework policy for Policy Subcommittee review.

In other business, the board approved:

- A Booster Club purchase of a concession stand, as presented by Shawn Walsh, Tom Guard and Bill Tilden of the athletic department.

- The addition of eighth graders for boys/girls lacrosse and girls softball on high school teams.

- Three field trips for the AFS intercultural club to New York City, Newport, and California.

in Needs Improvement and 1 percent in the Warning category.

In Math, Ms. Bowman reported that 10 percent of Grade 3 students were in the Advanced category, 59 percent were Proficient, 30 percent in Needs Improvement and 0 percent in the Warning category. Ms. Bowman said that 69 students took the test and that Center School was ranked 7 in the state in English Language Arts achievement. In the Math area, weaknesses were in geometry and measurement and that the staff and administration were focusing in on the areas that need to be addressed. Grade 3 is the first grade tested under the MCAS program.

Old Hammondtown principal Matt D'Andrea presented next and gave an overall view of Grades 4, 5 and 6 which showed, in Language Arts, that 24 percent of students were in the Advanced category, 56 percent were in the Proficient area, 15 percent Needs Improvement and 5 percent were in the Warning category.

"We're heading in the right direction," said Mr. D'Andrea, as he compared scores from 2009 and 2010, which were, in most cases, lower than current scores. In 2009, MCAS scores showed Grade 5 Mathematics with 14 percent of students in the Warning category, but the 2011 figure is 9 percent.

Chairwoman Grace Knox said that she was pleased with the scores presented in that they are moving in an upward direction, with a few exceptions.

"Remember that each year we are dealing with a new group of students with various strengths and abilities and yet the scores are moving up... that is something to be proud of," said Ms. Knox.

In other business, the committee heard from Ray Andrews who updated the committee on his efforts in fundraising to restore the Center School clock. To date, Mr. Andrews has raised approximately $14,360. The fundraising goal is $75,000 for total removal, restoration and replacement back in the school. "I'm a committee of one," said Mr. Andrews, who asked the committee to consider helping in the effort by getting current students and the PTA involved in some way. Members of the PTA who attended the meeting agreed to e-mail with Mr. Andrews and discuss ways to assist in the effort. Chairwoman Knox and Superintendent Doug White agreed to help by working with Mr. Andrews on a letter which would be sent via e-mail through the ConnectEd system which contacts parents of all students in the district.

- The Acushnet Public School District is seeking a one-year trial membership of the Regional Educational Assessment and Diagnostic Services collaborative. Homecoming Festivities

School Report

By Anne Smith

Every year, the students of Old Rochester Regional High School come together as a community that is rich with school spirit during homecoming week. The Bulldogs will once again be facing the Fairhaven Blue Devils in their homecoming football game, which is scheduled for Friday, October 21. Leading up to the game, many students have been meeting on weekday nights in various rooms of the building for skit practices and have thoroughly been enjoying the theme days of homecoming week.

For those who are unfamiliar with the homecoming traditions at Old Rochester Regional, here is an explanation. Starting on Monday, October 17, and concluding on Friday, October 21, the students of the high school dress according to certain themes that are set every year by the school council. This year, Monday was Neon Day, Tuesday was Nerd Day, Wednesday was Wild West Day, Thursday was Harry Potter Day, and Friday was Class Colors and Skit Day. Most students of Old Rochester Regional try to come up with clever outfits that meet the theme; not all students participate, though, since the theme days are not mandatory and are just a fun way for the students to express school spirit, solidarity, and overcome the class divisions. The last day of the week, Class Colors and Skit Day, naturally divides the student body according to their classes, and encourages competition between the different age groups, for the good of the school population. Friday concludes with the annual pep rally, in which the Athletic Director and team captains lead the school in a chant, the cheerleaders and the dance team perform, the band and individual student musicians play various pep rally-inspired songs, and the classes each take a turn presenting a skit to the student body, which is judged by a panel of three judges.

These skits are a unique tradition of Old Rochester Regional. Each class votes on a theme, often taking inspiration from a movie, television show, book, musician, or other pop culture phenomena. Students who wish to participate in the skit then meet for three days leading up to the pep rally, using the time to come up with a plot, characters, script, and set. The rules of the pep rally skit competition is that the Bulldog must be involved, there must be conflict between the good guys (ORR) and the bad guys (Fairhaven), and new to this year, there must be a reference to the 50th anniversary of Old Rochester Regional High School's founding. The ultimate goal of the classes in the skit competition is to unseat the seniors, who typically win. Often the skits involve videos that are filmed prior to the pep rally. In these videos, teachers sometimes make cameos – but it is important to note that, as another rule of the skit competition, teachers cannot play main characters.

Old Rochester Regional students take skit practice very seriously. The true question this year is whether the senior class – of which I am a member – will be able to rise to the occasion and create an entertaining and professional skit, seeing as our skits have been less than stellar in the past. (Our skit history includes Legally Blonde, The Musical, G.I. Joe, and The Incredibles, all of which turned out terrible.)

The homecoming week festivities conclude not with the homecoming football game against Fairhaven, but with the homecoming dance on Saturday, October 22. The dance takes place from 7:00 to 10:00 pm in the high school cafeteria. Students have been able to purchase tickets in the cafeteria for the past week, and must bring their tickets with them to the dance. School policy requires students attending the dance to take a breathalyzer test before entering the dance, and to leave school property once they have decided to leave the dance (especially if they are leaving the dance early). Students should be picked up from the dance by parents or guardians promptly, as school officials do not want students milling around the building at late hours.

Continuing with our Annual Halloween Story Contest, we'll be sharing these stories with you each week in October and announcing the winner in the October 27 edition.

Hallow's Eve

Entry #9

Considered too old to go trick-or-treating, I was in my bed, reading Harry Potter And The Prisoner Of Azkaban for about the hundredth time. It is a really good book. I mean, who wouldn't love having an escaped convict for a godfather and a werewolf for a teacher? Personally, I wouldn't mind. So I was sitting there, reading to my hearts content, wondering how much candy I could swipe from my younger siblings, when there was a sound, like a distant, far-away voice...

Malachite and his pack are coming... coming... coming...

"That's enough Harry Potter for one night." I told myself while putting the book down. My left eyebrow started to twitch, a sign that something was awry. It was at that moment the phone rang. It which made jump and give a little yelp, which sounded oddly dog-like. I didn't recognize the number, so I let it ring away. It rang 14 times, ten more than normal. I gulped as the answering machine finally picked up. There was static. Only static, and then, "Malachite and his pack is coming... You have been warned..." and then there was more static, which ended abruptly.

Calm yourself, Lupine. I kid you not, my last name really is Lupine. Still, I was shaking. Who gets calls from creepy voices at night any way? Oh, right. Me. My life, in the space of two minutes, had been turned inside-out, upside-down and spun around so fast it could have beaten a top-of-the-line washing machine. I ran around the house, shutting every door, slamming every window and pulling down every shade. Finally satisfied with my handiwork, I went to my room and armed myself. No, not with a gun, but with a girl's best friend and an ancient hunter's best friend. The all purpose cell phone and the versatile bow-and-arrow. Then, being me, I turned on the TV. All that on was were dull 'specials' and boring repeats. The only thing that was of any interest (very slight interest) was the news. Even that was dull and boring, but there was a wicked storm headed our way. It did seem strange on the radar, though, when it suddenly hit Massachusetts and literally filed down to a cell the exact size and shape of the tri-town area. The news people flicked that off the screen, even though it had gone from being the size of New York to Cape Cod in about two seconds. Now there was a newscaster babbling on and on about how the moon was full and blue even though the new moon was just days away. I didn't pay attention, for at that moment the house went black. I mean blacker than pitch. Blacker than the worst nightmare possible. It was so dark that it was blinding. The black subsided with a blinding flash that nearly burned my eyes out. I blinked them open and found myself at the graveyard behind Old Colony.

I see you got here on time, the voice was exactly like the one on my answering machine.

"Who are you?" I called into the night.

Awwww, look at the little moon-shifter, scared of her own element. Then the voice started laughing, but it was more a growl than a laugh. More laugh-growls joined in and soon the air was heavy and full of them.

It set my nerves on edge, as I felt the hair on the back of my neck bristle. "Stop it!" I cried.

Come on, little moon-shifter, don't you cry, Malachite wants to see you DEAD! Several huge, shaggy black shapes jumped out from behind the grave stones. I felt the blood in me boil. Who was this person to come onto my territory anyway?

"Die!" I barked as I charged at the coming wolves. Something was happening as I lunged through the dark. My shape was changing, fueled by the power and wisdom and leadership coursing through my veins. "Where are you, Malachite? I know who you are and I have figured out who and what I am." Truth be told, I was as confused as ever. Was I a moon-shifter like the voice was saying or was I dreaming?

"Ah, Raven Cloak, so nice to see you again." Barked a very familiar voice. I whipped around and there he was.

"Malachite!" I growled. "You dare invade the territory that belongs to me? I thought I drove you away years ago, you filthy little creep of an omega!" Now I was really confused. Old memories of a long-lost life were resurfacing rapidly. And they were scaring me. I growled again. "I chased you out when the world was new. You betrayed the pack and you were punished, so why do you return?" The hungry wolf in front of me said nothing but stood there, thinking. Then he lunged, and soon we were in the fight of the century "You were the worst alpha ever. But you don't know that now, do you? It seems that rockslide I created wasn't enough to kill you the first time. Now it seems I'll have to kill you again."

I could not believe what was happening, to me. I thought I had left this part of my life a long time ago. "You killed Sun Fur's last pup and you needed to be punished. You should have been thankful I didn't kill you last time, omega."

Malachite was relentless. He attacked again and again. I felt the flesh being ripped from my right shoulder.

I prayed to Mother Earth for the strength to prevail, to bring peace to the pack. Malachite came at me again. I lunged at him and grabbed for his throat. I bit down hard and heard his bones crush. My mouth filled with his blood. In an instant, Malachite vanished. I stood there, motionless, the other wolves were approaching slowly. I raised my head to the sky. "I am Raven Cloak! Hear me howl! Come, pack members of old and new! Make the Raven Cloak Pack strong once more!" The pack raised their heads and howled in approval. I continued howling deep into the night.

The next day, I awoke to the sun shining and the birds chirping. I could not believe the strange dream I had. As I stretched, my hands touched the headboard and my heart stopped cold. It wasn't a dream. Carved into the mahogany was a message...

I will be back, Haven Cloak.

The Ghost Song

Entry #10

"Fifteen men on the dead man's chest. Yo-Ho-Ho and a bottle of rum!"

That was what Johnny and his younger brother heard that day as they were playing ball not far from Halloween. Being close to Halloween, Johnny and Ivan, his brother, didn't pay much attention to it. Fifteen minutes later their mom called them in for dinner. Dinner was macaroni. Actually, every other day dinner was macaroni. After dinner Johnny brushed his teeth, put on his pajamas and went to bed just like on any ordinary night. But this night was NOT ordinary. In fact it was anything but ordinary. Johnny and his brother did not sleep a wink that hopeless night. All night Johnny and Ivan heard that dreadful song they had heard earlier during their baseball game.

"Fifteen men on the dead man's chest. Yo-Ho-Ho and a bottle of rum!"

The song was played with an organ and the voice did not seem of a living human being. But that was not the strangest thing - the voice was coming from either everywhere or nowhere at the same time. That morning, Johnny and Ivan told their mom about their experience over pancakes. There were no strange songs. At school Johnny told everyone he knew about the song. Bad idea! If there's one thing you should never do is go around school telling people about a song that doesn't exist. It was at that point that Johnny went to the nurse only to find that Ivan was already there. A few minutes later Johnny and Ivan's mom got two parent-teacher phone calls suggesting she take Johnny and Ivan to the doctor after school. That's how Johnny's mom found two scarecrows instead of two children in the backseat of her car at the parking lot for the doctor's office. Meanwhile, Johnny and Ivan had decided to find out what was going on with the odd song once and for all. Johnny was pacing back and forth in the road when it hit him. The song had been sung universally by pirates. Ghost pirates! That must be who was singing the strange song. Johnny had once listened to a story about how the great ship of their great-great-great-well, so many greats it would be too hard to count-grandfather, Captain "Red-Eye" Ronald the pirate, had been dismantled and used to build Johnny and Ivan's house, and that's when he saw him. Red-Eye himself wearing all his whites and greys. He was standing - no floating- on the porch of his house. Or, at least that's how it appeared to Johnny and Ivan. For of course what they saw was a ghost and as most people well know ghosts do float and are always greyish white. Johnny and Ivan were frozen with fear when the awful song started up again to confirm their thoughts.

"Fifteen men on the dead man's chest. Yo-Ho-Ho and a bottle of rum!"

As the song ended so did Red-Eye as he disappeared. But this was not to be the last they saw of him.

When Johnny's mom got home with the scarecrows she was madder than a bull seeing red. Johnny and Ivan were banned from going trick-or-treating. But that was okay. Their mom always kept a bowl full of candy by the door so they were covered.

Halloween was tomorrow but nothing happened. Nothing at least until midnight when the world as Johnny and Ivan knew it was blown into complete chaos. The song they most dreaded was blaring and all of a sudden they heard plates crash downstairs. Johnny and Ivan were up and running in a jiffy. The family ghost was at it again, smashing china plates in the kitchen. Johnny grabbed an old vase off the kitchen table. Now he was ready to do battle. Johnny swiped and lunged at Red-Eye making him more mad and scary than ever. Ivan was hiding under the sink waiting for it all to be over. As a last resort Johnny threw the vase. As soon as the vase reached Red-Eye, the ghost's form shifted and was sucked into the vase. Ivan was nearby and being under the sink he had access to the ducktape. So, at the last moment he sprang out from under the sink and ducktaped the opening of the vase. A split second later their parents were both downstairs and they did not look happy. So that's how they finally ended up going in for a check-up in the mental hospital. Luckily they were not found to be insane. They were, however, found with lots of candy snuck from the bowl by their door. They learned that the vase Johnny threw was going to be a present for their cousins in Oklahoma. This meant that the ghost was going away forever. Perfect. Johnny and Ivan were fine, and they had all the candy from their bowl they could lay their hands on.

The End.

Eerie Crackle

Entry #12

It was a beautiful night. The moon was shining bright on the streets of Fairhaven Massachusetts, but this night was not just any night. It was Halloween night! The night that children dress up as their favorite TV show characters or a spooky creature of the night. The holiday that children list as their third favorite holiday, aside from their birthday and Christmas of course.

This particular Halloween there was a whole group of people ranging from children ages 5-15 and adults going trick or treating. There were so many costumes from dinosaurs to bumble bees. There were two five year olds, one eight year old and four 15 year olds, and we can't forget the three sets of adults. Obviously all these people were friends looking for some fun on Halloween night.

The four teenagers, Mandy, Ashley, Joseph, and Adam decided to go off and trick or treat by themselves. They had covered one Whole Street and decided to go down a little side street. There were four houses on this street. They went to the first three expecting penny candy and came out with whole snickers bars! Then they came to a gray house with broken windows and vines. They climbed the many steps to get to the front porch. When they got there, there was sign on the door that said, "Enter if you dare!" thinking it was just a Halloween decoration they entered without hesitation.

The door opened with a "Creek!" Luckily they all had glow sticks with them because it was extremely dark in the house. When they took one step inside the house the door slammed shut! Mandy and Ashley screamed while Adam and Joseph clung to each other. When they walked in the house more, they saw a large staircase and one set of French doors on either side of the stairwell. Although it sounds rather nice it was actually quite dusty. "I think we should split up. Joe and I upstairs and the girls down here," said Adam. Everyone nodded in approval. The girls did Eeny, meeny, miny, moe to see which set of French doors they should go through. It came out left so they went through doors to find an empty circular room with lots of gray curtains or at least they looked gray because of all the dust. They kept walking until Ashley bumped in to something. "Ow! Mother of pearl!" said Ashley agitated. "What is it?" asked Mandy. Ashley shrugged. The girls took out their glow sticks and shined them over this large thing. "It's a piano," said Ashley. Mandy sat down on the piano seat and ran her hands over the Keys. "They aren't dusty," she stated calmly. Then she began to play "Mary had a little lamb".

The boys upstairs had come across a library with a huge grandfather clock in it. "You thinking what I'm thinking?" Joe said. Adam nodded as they began to pull out books looking for a trap door. After a while they gave up and sat on the floor thinking. They began to hear "Mary had a little lamb". "You hear that?" asked Adam. "Yah but it's not real, it's just a way to scare kids on Halloween," said Joseph. Adam walked over to the grandfather clock and opened it. He started to back up slowly as a skeleton fell out. He screamed and so did Joseph. All of the sudden the skeleton got up slowly and made a loud cackling laugh!

The girls heard it from downstairs and screamed. They ran out of the French doors to the bottom of the stairs to see Adam and Joseph running for their lives down the stairs. Ashley and Mandy could faintly see something running after Adam and Joe! They waited for the boys to get the bottom of the stairs then they all ran to the door. They tried to open it but it wouldn't budge. They heard the skeletons loud cackle again. "Ok, on 3 we push. 1...2...3!" said Ashley. They pushed and the whole door came down, and they fell right on their faces. They got up and ran down the road. They all stopped at the beginning of the street and looked back. The skeleton was standing there waving. "Wait kids you forgot your candy!" They turned and ran down the street screaming, "We are never going trick or treating again!"

When they went to sleep that night with buckets full of candy by their sides all they could hear was the skeletons eerie cackle!

The Three Witches

Entry #13

On one dark stormy scary Halloween night there lived three witches. One was named Wart Face Wanda, the second was named Humpback Harriet and the last one the scariest of all Toothless Terrifying Tabitha.

They all lived in an old creepy house. In every corner there were cobwebs hanging. The lights would always flicker on and off and you would always hear a creek creek sound in that old house. No one dared to go near but on that Halloween night something mysterious was going to happen.

Six kids were getting ready for Halloween. Their names were Tayler, Brady, Grayson, Payton, Lexi, and Emma. They were all very excited but they didn't know what the witches were planning. The witches were cooking up a storm. Toothless Terrifying Tabitha was gathering all the rats and spiders to put in the stew. Humpback Harriet was clipping her toenails into the stew and Wart face Wanda was catching frogs to put in the stew.

It was finally dark enough to go trick-or-treating. We lit the pumpkin and off we went. First stop was at the Lebraun's house where PJ gave us each 5 pieces of candy and a homemade brownie and off we went. Our bags were filled with delicious treats. Lexi and Payton kept eating their candy as we were walking to each house. Everyone was dressed in crazy costumes like monsters, fairies, bugs and skeletons. As everyone was walking to each decorated house and gathering our candy we saw something mysterious rise out of the witches house. It was the witches! They were flying around on their brooms heckling and yelling a chant- " Haunted houses witches' dreams ghost and globulins come alive on Halloween hahaha" Everyone was very scared especially the six kids. Humpback Harriet was going house to house taking everyone's candy. Wart face Wanda was stealing everyone's Halloween decorations and Toothless Terrifying Tabitha was taking all of the children and getting ready to put them into the stew.

The witches had captured Brady, Grayson, Payton, Lexi, Emma and Tayler. The children were very very scared. "What is going to happen to us?" Tayler asked. "What should we do?" "I have an idea" Grayson said and yelled out "grab that bucket of water!"

On the count of three they all threw the bucket of water at the witches and the witches sank to the ground and melted. The last word they said was "noooooo!!!!"

All the kids cheered and were very happy, as they had defeated the witches! They all ran back home and celebrated with a Halloween party and enjoyed eating all their candy.

Happy Halloween!

Fifteen: A Halloween Story

Entry #14

"Hello?"

"Hey, it's me."

"Callie? When are you coming over? A bunch of people are here already."

"Do you have power?"

"Kind of. I mean, it's been flickering for about an hour, but how cool is that? A black-out on Halloween! Why? You don't have power? I thought your dad bought a generator after the hurricane."

"I'm not home. I'm house-sitting for the Serlings."

"What about my party?"

"They promised they'd be home by ten. And then they'll drive me right over to your place."

"But why tonight?"

"I told you. My dad wants me to help pay for the car and he and Mrs. Serling work together so..."

"...They're going out and they didn't want to leave the house alone because it's Halloween. Poor you."

"And they don't have a generator. You should've seen me trying to find candle and matches in the dark. I was freaking out."

"It sounds like you still are."

"I am! I'm in some beach house way out on the Neck, the storm blew out the power, I can't get a hold of the Serlings, and my cell phone is dying."

"So charge it."

"I can't, stupid! I don't have any power... Natalie? ... Hello?"

"I'm not stupid."

"I know. I'm just scared. No one is out tonight because of the weather and I'm all by myself. I swear, I keep hearing some kind of thumping noise outside, but I'm too scared to go look."

"Call your dad."

"I can't. He's still mad at me for wrecking the car going 'joy riding' with you."

"And we didn't even see it."

"What?"

"The White Ghost-Horse of Wolf Island Road!"

"Of course we didn't! It's just a story! Your brother made up all that stuff to scare you!"

"Well, you seemed to believe it! You couldn't wait to do down there looking for it."

"Yeah, I know."

"And I seem to remember both of us sitting outside The Inn looking up at the windows for the 'Dead Sea Captain'. And it was your idea to check out that house that's haunted with ghosts that look like they're from the 1700s or something..."

"I know."

"...And they walk around like they don't know they're dead..."

"I know."

"And when guests stay there, they wake up in the middle of the night with the ghosts all staring down at them like, 'Who are you?'"

"I know! I get it! I believed all that scary stuff, too, only right now I'm dealing w--- some scary stuff of my own! I keep hearing that thumping noise outside. Can y --hear it?"

"No. And you're breaking up."

"My phone's dying."

"You sure you don't want to call your dad?"

"No. He alr---- think we're idiots. I don't w--- him to think I can't babysit a house for a few ---rs!"

"You mean, he think I'm an idiot, right? You already said I'm stupid, so I guess that means you both think so."

"Natalie..."

"What? I should go back to my party soon. Some more people just arrived."

"Please don't h--- up! I'm scared. I really wish we hadn't had that séance the other night and used that Ouija ---rd."

"What?"

"The OUIJA BOARD! I wish -- hadn't used it!"

"It was fun! I know we didn't get through to any dead people from the Ellis Bolles Cemetery, but I thought it was awesome the way it kept spelling out 'Fifteen' over and over."

"I w--- we'd never done it."

"Why?"

"Because I just remembered... the Serlings' house... this house... it's num--- ---teen!"

"Your cell's dying. It's what?"

"FIFTEEN! FIFTEEN! Just like the Ouija board said!"

"So what are you saying, Callie? That because it was my idea to have the séance with the Ouija board I'm stupid?"

"...Can you hear that, Natalie?..."

"No."

"It sounds l--- something's trying -- get in here!"

"Callie, I've got to go. Get what you're trying to do now, okay? 'Stupid Natalie' will fall for anything, right? Ha ha. I'm hanging up now."

"No!"

"If you didn't want to come to me party, all you had to do was say so."

"Natalie! Call -- dad! Please, call my ---! Call --- police!"

"Nice try."

"I think --- in the house!"

"You're so lame."

"GO AWAY!"

"Don't worry. I am."

"-----"

"Good-bye Callie."

The Boy Who Was Afraid of Halloween

Entry #15

There was a little boy who was afraid of Halloween. Not just of the shrieking ghost and ghastly ghouls of the season, but even of the trick-or-treaters who came to his door. Who knew what lay behind those masks? Certainly not the kids next door! He was afraid of it all, from the decorations to dark night lit by a silvery full moon.

As a toddler the little boy would look out the window and see the wind moving the decorations. He was too little to know it was the wind, instead thinking the ghosts and witches and scarecrows were real.

The little boy was also afraid of the neighbor's dog who guarded its family's decorations by taking up sentry on the front lawn. The little boy would look out the window and shrink back. His mother told him again and again that none of this was real, it was all make-believe. His preschool teacher told him too.

This particular year they were going trick-or-treating. "It's all make believe," his mother reminded him. "Not real, okay?" He nodded, but he still wasn't convinced. So off on Halloween night, door to door to get candy in his plastic pumpkin. The little boy liked this part. But then he went to the house across the street. The neighbor's dog was nowhere in sight, so he breathed a small sigh of relief. Clenching his mother hand, he noticed the decorations not moving in the wind. "Make believe or not," he told himself while he closed his eyes tight and bit his lip. He opened them to see something white trailing toward them, down the walk, and he was ready to scream, heart beating wildly, when he saw a tail at the end of the ghost! Hey, wait a minute! It was a little dog! The little dog had become tangled in the ghost decoration, and was running trying to free himself at the same time greeting the boy. He laughed with delight. The little dog wasn't so bad after all, and there really was no such thing as ghosts! All along his mother and teachers were right. It's all make-believe. He began enjoying Halloween each year after that and is no longer afraid. That little boy was once in all of us, too – do you remember? HAPPY HALLOWEEN!

Keep an eye out next week for the final installment of our Halloween stories, and good luck to all those who entered!

Digital Memories

By Anne Kakley

There we were – my four-year-old daughter Hazel and I – listening to Outkast's "Hey Ya" in the living room while we waited for dinner to come out of the oven.

When the song urged me to "shake it, shake it, shake it like a Polaroid picture", I obliged.

"Stop Mom!" Hazel said. Oh my goodness, she is already embarrassed by her mom and she's not even in kindergarten yet.

Of course, I shook it even more, and when the song was over, Hazel asked: "Mom, what is a Polaroid? Is that a naughty word? Is that a swear?"

What ensued was an exhausting fifteen-minute explanation of how pictures used to be. There was something called film, and it had to get developed. There were many methods for development, and there used to be little huts at the supermarket parking lot with darkroom basements for development. The film had to be developed in the dark or it would be destroyed. And then there were pictures called Polaroids that were way more magical to us because it would develop right then and there and you could see the picture within a few minutes. And to speed the process, we would shake the picture. Hence, the shaking in the song.

So it sounds perfectly logical to you, because you remember film and Polaroids, but to young Hazel, I might as well have been describing quantum physics.

It got me thinking about how much things have changed. You remember those formal pictures that you would have to take at a Sears Portrait Studio? And it's not bad enough that you would have to pose in a cheesy studio with a fake farm backdrop – you also had to dress the part. On go the tights and the frilly socks. Dresses with bows, bows in your hair, and a scary-looking guy playing with your hair and tilting your head so you look just right. You couldn't screw it up and you couldn't preview it, so you would have to get it right first try.

Anne Kakley
anne@wanderer.com

But that's a mostly bygone era, and with the advent of the scanner, those old portraits have taken new life as fodder for www.AwkwardFamilyPhotos.com.

The Polaroid conversation got me realizing how easy Hazel has it. She gets to wear comfortable clothes and get her picture taken doing fun things. She gets to see the picture instantly, and in a few years, when she enters the self-conscious stage – she can retake the photos without ever developing the bad ones.

I have a whole shoebox full of pictures where our eyes were half-shut, or if our eyes were completely open, they were red and we looked possessed. Nowadays, we would just re-take the picture, or use a red-eye removing filter in a photo-editing program. No problem.

Moreover, the ease of photo-taking and photo editing has raised the bar. I went to a pumpkin patch with Hazel and Frankie this weekend, and brought my iPhone with me. My iPhone is about the size of a deck of cards. It fits in my pocket and takes better photos than most cameras I've ever owned in my life. I could share the photos instantly with my relatives, without leaving the pumpkin patch.

20 years ago, that would have absolutely blown my mind. We're living in the future! Where's my hovercraft?!

But there is still a small part of me that is nostalgic for the way things used to be. The winding of film on its reel, advancing the film, dropping it off, picking it up, receiving that package and the excitement of flipping through those photos for the first time. It was an exciting, tactile experience that resulted in more framed photos and no Facebook comments.

I wanted to buy some film and have Hazel take some old-fashioned pictures so she could understand how things used to be. But the only film cameras I could find were on eBay and I didn't know where to buy film for them.

And now, film developers are few and far between. There are some die-hard folks out there, who bought their expensive Nikon and will use it until it croaks, but for the rest of us, it's a digital world out there.

So... smile!

To the Editor:

My guess is that a lot of Rochester people think that the Hartley-Zell folks must be having nightmares. They did such a great job designing, building and landscaping The Pines off Route 105. The 55-and-over development is a real asset to the community. But the questions... if only we hadn't named it The Pines at Hathaway Pond... if only we hadn't named the road Hathaway Pond Circle... if only we hadn't charged a premium for those properties closer to the water... if only we had bought the dam when Susie Hampson offered it to us. Everyone makes mistakes. But they shouldn't compound those mistakes by attacking the Buzzards Bay Coalition. The Coalition has a nearly 25-year history of working to support and preserve local agriculture and is working with Rochester cranberry growers to provide more reliable sources of water than Hathaway Pond provided. I think The Pines on the Sippican River has a nice ring to it...

To the Editor:

Perhaps a wiser choice for an eighth grade reading assignment at Old Rochester Regional would have been a different book where students would meet characters like themselves facing challenges and coming of age in today's world.

As school systems bemoan declining reading scores, teachers and parents know that good readers write and think better than poor readers.

The world read thousands of pages of Harry Potter who lived in a world of reality and fantasy, of good and the evil, of prejudice and love. Harry was a person most everyone knew.

A great book calls on readers to discuss, to question, to create solutions, and to dream.

Stephen King suggests, "Books are portable magic."

My years of experience as a parent, teacher and drama coach have shown me that a good book inspires youngsters to think critically, to act differently, to speak confidently, and to dream.

It may happen that the student evaluation of the selected book will result in snickering, rather than in dreaming.

approved 96 units as being more appropriately scaled and more capable of being rationally absorbed. Subsequently, the State overruled Marion and approved the full 192 units. The town then litigated with the developer for 8 years, leading to Marion's Zoning Board of Appeals granting approval for 168 units. However, when the 168-unit project went to Marion's Conservation Commission for approval, it was vigorously opposed by a group of concerned citizens and abutters of which the undersigned are a part. (63 percent)

- Number of For Sale Units: From 0 to 36
- Number of Affordable Units: From 42 (25 percent) to 60 (63 percent)
- Completion of the Bike Path: Would be included in restructured deal.
- Conservation Land: Would be included in restructured deal – 12 of 24 acres.
- Filling of Wetlands: Wetlands would not be filled in restructured deal.
- Widening of Front Street: Would not be part of restructured deal.

The advantages of reducing the scale of the project to 96 units are that a greater portion of it can be absorbed by Marion residents and their families (who will get preference) and that there will be more sewer capacity left for other Marion property owners, many of whom have been waiting for a long time. Also, even though the restructured project would be much smaller in scale, it would contain more units that are actually affordable (60 versus 42) and it will now offer 36 much needed smaller homes for purchase. With Littleneck recently completed, enabling the Baywatch project to move forward would result in sufficient progress that Marion would not be susceptible to another “unfriendly” 40B for 3 or more years (about 20 units are required per year). During this time a “friendly” project could hopefully be lined up that would better spread out the remaining number of units needed to meet the State’s requirement that 10 percent of Marion’s housing stock be affordable.

There would be three additional major advantages of the downsized project. First, by reducing the number of cars, the development’s entrance on Front Street would no longer require a “third lane” so the arrival experience as one comes down from Route I95 into Marion would be less urban looking and less congested. Second, a pathway would be donated by abutters that would provide the missing link to complete the bike path and enable Marion to apply for approximately $1.5 million of Federal bike path funding. Third, the developer will not only set aside 12 of its total of 34 acres as conservation land, but they will also accept $300,000 for this land which is a fraction of its value and which Marion's Community Preservation Commission has approved for the use of CPA funds (already in hand and partially provided by the State) subject to approval by Town Meeting.

For the above reasons we believe the project as restructured is a much better result for Marion. We encourage everyone to come to the Town Meeting at 7:00 pm on October 25 at Sippican School, hear the presentations, and then decide if you will vote to approve the CPC's recommendation, which would then result in the smaller project moving forward. Without Marion voter approval, the developer would proceed with the larger 168-unit project and all the benefits described above would be lost.

Sincerely,
David Croll

MOVIE REVIEW

Thing 1/Thing 2

By Rob Gonsalves

www.robsmovievault.com

The Thing. Starring Mary Elizabeth Winstead and Joel Edgerton. Directed by Matthijs van Heijningen. Running time: 102 minutes. MPAA rating: R.

Give credit where it's due: The Thing is not a remake of John Carpenter's 1982 classic (or Christian Nyby's 1951 classic, for that matter, of which Carpenter's film was a remake). It is, rather, a prequel to the 1982 film, exploring what happened at the Norwegian camp in Antarctica that the Thing escaped from, at the beginning of the '82 film, en route to the American camp. I myself had been curious about what had gone down among the Norwegians. As it happens, the events at the Norwegian camp are pretty much the same as the events at the American camp. Aside from a new way to distinguish a real human from a person who's been absorbed and imitated by the Thing, the new film doesn't come up with anything fresh. It's like the Star Wars prequels: Fan-fiction speculation over the years was probably more inventive than what has now been presented to us as Thing canon.

The major difference here, of course, is that the various permutations and transformations of the Thing carry the telltale sheen of CGI, whereas Rob Bottin's revolutionary latex work in the 1982 film always occupied real physical space, giving the actors something to react to and interact with. Reportedly, the new film once sought to follow in Bottin's footsteps with entirely practical effects, but the dailies apparently disappointed, and the studio ordered up digital enhancements. What's left of the real-world sculpting of Alec Gillis and Tom Woodruff Jr. looks appropriately savage and surreal, but the result of the tweaking is that the Thing can now move more quickly and fluidly, and can do things it somehow can't do later on, in the 1982 film.

Of course an American audience wouldn't be trusted to maintain interest in a Norwegian-camp prequel composed entirely of Norwegians speaking subtitled Norwegian. So we have four Americans, an Englishman, a French woman, and a bunch of indistinct Norwegians, most of whom obligingly speak fluent English. One of the Americans is Mary Elizabeth Winstead as a paleontologist recruited to have a look at the Thing discovered buried in the ice. Winstead isn't a bad actress (she was a delight in Scott Pilgrim Vs. the World), and at 26 she could plausibly be a college graduate and practicing scientist herself, but the problem is she doesn't look it. Like many another actress these days, she looks far younger than her years. She doesn't get to do much science-y stuff anyway, though she does figure out that the Thing can't replicate inorganic material, so anyone without fillings in his teeth is suspect. (I'm guessing she means it can't imitate anything bioinorganic, but the producers may have feared such a word would confuse the same stupes who were assumed to need Americans in a Norwegian story.)

Look at the 1982 Thing again and you see a perfect thunderstorm of paranoia and suspense, brewed up by the clash of the cold front of director John Carpenter's cool-cucumber style (the camera almost never moves, and it stares objectively at the characters much as a Thing would) and the warm front of Rob Bottin's excitable-boy, sugar-fueled metamorphosis sequences, where chaos reigns. Director Matthijs van Heijningen, a fan of the Carpenter film, gets the externals but can't duplicate the authentic chill and isolation of the original. (In some scenes, too, the steam wafting out of characters' mouths in the cold air seems real, while in others it seems digitally pasted in. It's distracting.) He isn't free to bring anything of his own, either; he's got prequel-cuffs around his wrists, locked into the look of the '82 film, and its denouement, too. We know this film has to end with a Norwegian attempting to kill the Thing before it reaches another camp, and we assume everyone else will die. They don't, though, and the door is left open for a sequel to this prequel: in addition to the Norwegian and American camps, there's a Russian camp we hadn't previously heard about. How many damn countries have guys stationed out there in the snow, and what are they all studying?

Tri-Town Relay for Life

Relay For Life of the Tri Town will join over 5,200 other Relay events across the nation in celebrating the ones that have survived, remembering those that we have lost and fighting back against cancer. The Relay For Life of the Tri-Town will begin the planning stages of this event on November 15 at Old Rochester Regional High School Library on 135 Marion Road, Mattapoisett, MA 02739. Relay will carry the message to the people of our community on June 8 and 9, 2012 at Old Rochester Regional High School. Help create more birthdays and bring an end to cancer. Last year, the Tri-Town Relay for Life raised a fundraising record of $84,000 and you can help!

Everyone in the community is encouraged to take part in fighting the battle against cancer and hear how they can make a difference in what has become the largest single non-profit organization in the world. For more information, please call Heather at 774-634-9301 or email the event at tritownrelay@comcast.net. You can also follow the group on Facebook or Twitter at Tri-Town Relay. The American Cancer Society Relay For Life is a life-changing event that gives everyone in communities across the globe a chance to celebrate the lives of people who have battled cancer, remember loved ones lost, and fight back against the disease. At Relay, teams of people camp out at a local high school, park, or fairground and take turns walking or running around a track or path. Each team is asked to have a representative on the track at all times during the event. Because cancer never sleeps, Relay For Life is an overnight event that lasts up to 24 hours.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're moving from a relatively stable situation to one that appears to be laced with perplexity. Be patient. You'll eventually get answers to help clear up the confusion around you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A vexing situation tempts you to rush to set it all straight. But it's best to let things sort themselves out so that you can get a better picture of the challenge you're facing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Financial matters could create some confusion, especially with a torrent of advice pouring in from several sources. Resist acting on emotion and wait for the facts to emerge.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That goal you've set is still in sight and is still in reach. Stay with the course that you're on. Making too many shifts in direction now could create another set of problems.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It might be time to confront a trouble-making associate and demand some answers. But be prepared for some surprises that could lead you to make a change in some long-standing plans.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. You're making great progress in sorting out all that confusion that kept you from making those important decisions. You're on your way now.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A difficult experience begins to ease. That's the good news. The not-so-good news is a possible complication that could prolong the problem awhile longer.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your self-confidence gets a much-needed big boost as you start to unsnarl that knotty financial problem. Expect some help from a surprising source.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Congratulations. Any lingering negative aftereffects from that not-so-pleasant workplace situation are all but gone. It's time now to focus on the positive.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your self-confidence grows stronger as you continue to take more control of your life. Arrange for some well-earned fun and relaxation with someone special.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) As usual, you've been concerned more about the needs of others than your own. You need to take time for yourself so that you can replenish all that spent energy.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Stronger planetary influences indicate a growing presence of people eager to help you navigate through the rough seas that might mark your career course.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can balance emotion and logic, which gives you the ability to make choices that are more likely than not to prove successful.

• Light Up the Sky – a comedy in three acts by Moss Hart – The Marion Art Center is now accepting reservations for its production of Moss Hart's Light Up The Sky, which opens on Friday, November 4 and runs on Saturday, November 5, Sunday, November 6 (4:00 pm matinee), Friday, November 11 and Saturday, November 12. Showtimes are 8:00 pm on November 4, 5, 11 and 12 and at 4:00 pm on Sunday, November 6.

Moss Hart wrote plays, musicals and a few screenplays from 1930 to 1960. He is well-known for his collaborations with George Kauffman, including You Can't Take It With You (1936) and The Man Who Came to Dinner (1939). By far his biggest hit was the musical My Fair Lady (1956), adapted from George Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion, with book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner and music by Frederick Loewe. The show ran over seven years and won a Tony Award for Best Musical. Hart picked up the Tony for Best Director. His last collaboration was with Lerner and Loewe in the hit musical Camelot (1960).

"Theater is not so much a profession as a disease." Moss Hart was a prime example of a man joyfully giving himself over to this disease afflicting all bitten by the theatrical bug and nowhere is the "bug" more evident than in his valentine to the theatre, Light Up The Sky.

Directed by Rex McGraw, the comedy revolves around a group of New York theatre-folk who attend the opening of their new play in Boston. It is a "backstage" comedy, in which the lead actress (played by Cynthia Latham), the Producer (played by Jay Ryan), the Director

Just Like Cats & Dogs by Dave T. Phipps

by Dave T. Phipps

(played by Jay Gould) and their close friends and spouses (played by David Horne as the older playwright, Emily Chandler, Susie Kokkins, Gary Taylor, Donna DeTerra and Mark Letourneau), are in various states of nervousness, exuberance, neurosis and seventh heaven on the opening night of what they desperately hope is the hugely successful work of a young unknown playwright (played by Jamie Alves). Gathered in a suite at the Ritz-Carlton in downtown Boston, these people go through their paces with hilarious gusto and dramatic exhibitions of temperament. However, the opening of the new play, which is a very earnest and experimental work, is such as to lead the cast, director and producer to believe it a huge flop. A long night ensues when they instantly turn against themselves, the production, and the young playwright and proceed in what looks like an attempt to destroy themselves and all their former hopes. Then, with the first rays of the morning sun, the tables are suddenly turned! It is very clear from the critics' reviews that in spite of the curious reception by the first night audience, the play has made a deep impression and the reviews are on the whole favorable. What happens next is a testament to the hopes and dreams of every troupe of actors who have ever "hit the boards" as they say in the biz.

Reservations are highly recommended, and can be made by calling 508-748-1266. Cabaret table seating is available for reserved parties of four or more. The Marion Art Center is located at 80 Pleasant Street, in Marion, MA 02738.

Gladys, who was known as the originator of the Mattapoisett Handbag, was also a dedicated instructor. The Mattapoisett Handbag combines scrimshawed ivory panels, handles and fittings with coiled pine needles stitched with raffia.

Come join the MWC and invite your friends. If you have a Mattapoisett Handbag, please bring it to display. Don Cuddy, host of the ORCTV show "Neighbor to Neighbor", will be showing video excerpts of his interview with Gladys.

Mattapoisett Woman's Club meetings are held in Reynard Hall, at the Mattapoisett Congregational Church, 27 Church Street, Mattapoisett. Guests are welcome to enjoy light sandwiches, dessert, tea and coffee. The program will follow the luncheon.

I Found the Aardvark!

Each week, hidden somewhere in the pages of The Wanderer is a tiny drawing of an aardvark. The little guy you are looking for looks exactly like the one pictured above (but don't put down this page as your answer, there's another one hidden somewhere in this issue).

Once you find the aardvark you can submit your answer online and if you are right you will get Aardvark Points! You can then use these points to get cool Aardvark Prizes!

Each time you find the Aardvark you will also be entered in our monthly drawing for other cool Aardvark Prizes.

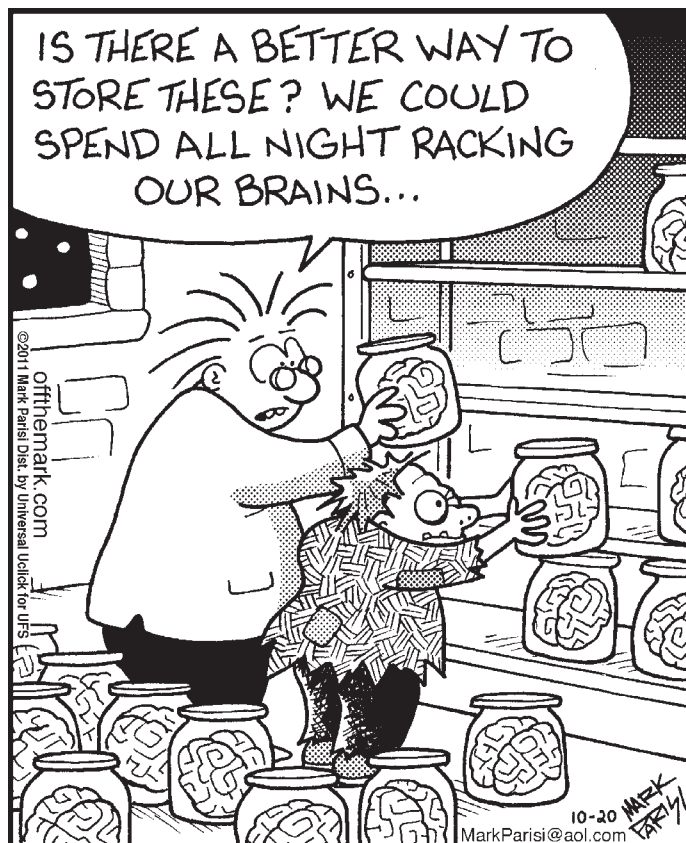

If you would like to enter the monthly drawing by mail, send your name, address and phone number along with the issue date and page number you found him in to: Wanderer - I Found the Aardvark, P.O. Box 102, Mattapoisett, MA 02739. Entries by mail will not be eligible for Aardvark Points.

To enter visit: www.wanderer.com and Click on "I Found the Aardvark"

In the October 13, 2011 issue
